ALLIED HEALTH PINNING CEREMONY

Cynthia Simpson's uniform is crisp and white. The glow of the candle held between her hands is reflected in her face. She is ready to receive her pin to signify that she and 49 other Manor Junior College Allied Health students are about to enter a world of service in a clinical environment.

The occasion is the annual Allied Health Pinning Ceremony, March 29, 1981.

It is a night of recognition of the accomplishments and the spirit which motivates these determined young women, all of whom will shortly become indispensable members of health care teams in our area. Their parents and friends too are a part of this tribute to learning, labor and dedication to the Allied Health professions for which Manor Jr. College provides training. Some 300 family members join with the members of the administration and faculty to honor the Allied Health Class of 1981.

The highlight of the evening is the address by Lester Rauer, M.D. Dr. Rauer is Chief of Pathology at Northeastern Hospital in Philadelphia and a member of the Advisory Committee for the MLT program.

The faculty of the Allied Health Division extend their hopes and best wishes to this group of students. Some already have a position lined up for after graduation. Some will go on to enter a bachelor's degree program at a four year institution. All are anxious to enter their professions.

Cindy's crisp and white uniform takes on added smartness with the gold pin on her lapel.

SUMMER SESSIONS

The Office of Continuing Education for Manor announces the Summer 1981 semester will include two day sessions in addition to regularly held evening classes. The summer day courses are being offered for the first time to accommodate part-time students, housewives, new students and college students who want to lighten a Fall semester class load.

GRADUATION AT MANOR

Commencement at Manor College was held on May 14, 1981. Ninety-two students received diplomas at these exercises which began with a procession from the Basileiad Library.

At 6:45 p.m.the students assembled for a procession from the Basileiad Library to Our Lady of Perpetual Help Hall, where Associate degrees were awarded to 34 candidates in the Business program; 52 in the Allied Health program, including 18 Medical Laboratory Technicians, 15 Medical Assistants and 15 Expanded Functions Dental Assistants; 4 Science Transfers and 6 Liberal Arts students also received their Associate Degree.

SAT REQUIREMENTS DROPPED FOR SECRETARIAL STUDENTS

The Placement Office at Manor receives ten times more job requests than applicants for secretarial jobs. It seems that the number of students taking secretarial science courses has been diminishing nationwide at a time when the need for these same students has increased. According to Jack Shields, Manor's Director of Development and Public Relations, "just when women are reaching for new opportunities in science, business, and health care, the area where women have historically dominated, but felt dead-ended, is now experiencing a new era of modernization and technological revolution. Offices everywhere are introducing memory typewriters, Shared Logic word processing with CRT screens, with mini-computer memories and high-speed printers, and computers of all sizes and configurations". The New York Times, in a March 10, 1981 article, reports that "Secretaries have pick of the jobs...demand is rising, pulling up salaries." Between 1978 and 1990, the Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts that demand is expected to increase 45 percent, more than twice the rate of all other occupations.

In seeking to satisfy these demands, as well as to allow many good potential students, who have high school secretarial background but who usually don't take the Scholastic Aptitude Test, the opportunity of going to college, Manor is no longer requiring the SAT for the Secretarial Science programs.

MAY ART EXHIBIT

The Annual May Exhibit of Art at Manor Junior College this year featured the work of Roxolana Luczakowsky-Armstrong. The exhibit, entitled "Etudes from Spain", was held in the Basileiad Library on the campus from May 3rd to the 17th.

Roxolana was born in the Ukraine and moved to Philadelphia in 1950, attending St. Basil and Little Flower High Schools. She studied art under Petro Mehyk at the Ukrainian Art Studio and studied painting and graphics under a scholarship to the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. She also received a Bachelor of Fine Arts from the University of Pennsylvania. Since 1964 she has been living in Malaga, Spain with her husband, American sculptor Reed Armstrong.

Her works are created in the spirit of humanism. She expresses it in her depictions of everyday life with all its trials; of the role and fate of women; in an understanding of the innocence of children and the uncertainties of their future.

CAREER AWARENESS

The Counseling Department organized several career awareness sessions this semester to prepare Manor's future graduates for employment. Marylou Delizia counselor at Manor, presented a skills identification workshop to business students to encourage them to focus on the meaning of "Skills" and what skills they want to utilize on a job.

Ruth Halpern, personnel manager and co-owner of Polysciences in Warrington, Pa., conducted a two hour workshop in resume writing for secretarial and business administration students. She discussed the elements of a good resume and critiqued resume samples for the Manor students.

Margaret Eisen, marketing director at the College of Optometry and board member of the Women's Center of Montgomery County, gave suggestions to students on how to handle difficult job interview questions, frequently asked of women. Ms. Eisen cited examples of her experiences in interviewing potential employees, as well as clarifying what the law states regarding what can be asked in an employment interview.
